Course Description

This course explores the role of culture in the genesis, structuring, and resolution of processes of conflict within and between groups. We will pay special attention to ethnicity and other subcultural (or metacultural) markers of identity in complex social systems as both generators and outcomes of conflict. Analysis will proceed through consideration of case-studies drawn from a variety of cultural and social settings. We will also discuss some critiques of the culture concept with special reference to conflict analysis and resolution.

Course Requirements

Required Readings (available at the GMU Arlington Bookstore or through E-reserve):*

*Kevin Avruch, "Type I and Type II Errors in Culturally Sensitive Conflict Resolution Practice," Conflict Resolution Quarterly 20(3):351-371, 2003 (on E-reserve)

Stanley Barrett, Culture Meets Power

Raymond Cohen, Negotiating Across Cultures, Revised Edition

John Conley & William O'Barr, Just Words: Law, Language and Power

Harold Isaacs, Idols of the Tribe: Group Identity and Political Change

Thomas Kochman, Black and White Styles in Conflict

Liisa Malkki, Purity and Exile: Violence, Memory, and National Cosmology Among Hutu Refugees in Tanzania

Lawrence Rosen, Bargaining for Reality: The Construction of Social Relations in a Muslim Community

The following two books, also available at the Bookstore, are optional:

Kevin Avruch, Culture and Conflict Resolution

Kevin Avruch, Peter W. Black & Joseph A. Scimecca, eds., Conflict Resolution: Cross-Cultural Perspectives (paperback)

The first requirement of this class is that you come prepared to discuss the readings. Also required is a term paper, on a topic of your choice, relevant to the (broad!) concerns of the class. This is due in my ICAR mailbox Wednesday, May 9, 2007. I'll have more to say on this in a hand-out later, but you might start thinking about possible topics; and you will need to talk with me when you decide on one. .
